 The Washington Power Breaker: Georgetown's Grassroots Law Professor (Jun. 30, 2011)

Blogger and Georgetown Law Professor Randy E. Barnett talks to Glenn Reynolds about how he became a grassroots hero. Is the Tea Party a sounding board for libertarian ideas and constitutional analysis? Hear more about ObamaCare, constitutional analysis, the enumerated powers, the commerce clause, the bill of rights and more.

Glenn, could this not all be redeemed by demanding that we return to Jeffersonian position in lieu of Marshal's that the court decides individual cases and thereby is one of the last checks for the protection of the individual citizen but not some power broker that dictates to the congress?

This would solve this idiotic tug-o-war of how the S.C. is peopled. It would cause the older justices to more readily retire and would also more truly impart justice to the citizen because a court justice would not be swayed by the possible political ramifications of their decisions. Or am I being to logical?
