

LAWFARE

Lawfare Live: The Electoral Count Act

Katherine Pompilio

Wednesday, April 20, 2022

For the first time in more than a century, Congress is debating reforming the Electoral Count Act that governs how electoral votes are counted in each presidential election. But what sort of reforms are being (or should be) considered? And what issues is the debate failing to cover?

On Thursday, Apr. 28, at 12:00 p.m. ET, Lawfare senior editor Scott R. Anderson—who recently wrote a related article for Politico—will sit down to answer your questions on these issues and more, along with two authors of another recent Lawfare piece on the topic: Thomas Berry, a research fellow in the Cato Institute’s Robert A. Levy Center for Constitutional Studies and managing editor of the Cato Supreme Court Review; and Genevieve Nadeau, counsel at Protect Democracy.

Register to attend by becoming a material supporter on Patreon of Lawfare.

Signing up to become a material supporter on Patreon of Lawfare earns you attendance at the weekly Lawfare Live show, where you can watch interviews with leading experts in real time and pose questions of your own. You also get the chance to join a community of Lawfare readers and listeners, engage more with Lawfare's top editors and contributors, and access ad-free versions of The Lawfare Podcast and Rational Security.