

Thursday, April 05, 2012

Opinion Piece Stumps for Deregulated Insurance Market

In an Orange County Register opinion piece, John Cochrane -- a professor of finance at the University of Chicago Booth School of Business and an adjunct scholar at the Cato Institute -- argues, "If we had a deregulated, competitive" health care and health insurance market, "that market would be so much cheaper than what's offered today that we would likely not even need the [individual] mandate."

- John Cochrane: OK, Let's Say Obamacare Goes; Then What? (Cochrane, Orange County Register, 4/4).