Voicing concern over search warrants

By ERIK HAUGSBY

June 7, 2010 | 9:48 p.m. CDT

Donald Warren speaks to the Columbia City Council about the non-necessity for search warrants for nonviolent crimes at the council meeting on Monday. His appearance comes after the Columbia Police executed a search warrant on the house of Jonathan Whitworth, a Columbia resident who was suspected to be in possession of marijuana. Warren said that the execution of a search warrant is inherently violent and quoted from publications of the Cato Institute to support his statements.
