The Ups and Downs of On-the-Go Think Tankery

Nancy Scola | October 25, 2010 - 10:05am | Email This!

More activity on the think tank app front! Cato's George Scoville, who serves as new media manager for that libertarian ideas shop, writes up Cato's experience in recently launching their free iPhone app. In my mini-review of think app mobile apps (Cato, Heritage, apple Inc. why that's the case. The app store, Apple argues, just way that makes sense. What it's also not set up to do is to share with content creators demographic insight about who's downloading their stuff, and Scoville and Bluey both mention that that's a bit of a pain to not know if they're getting used by chiefs of staff in the Senate or 13 year-old aspiring Hayeks in Des Moines. But that's life in the Apple apps store. Seems like the sort of thing someone might want to hold a hearing on.
