Outlook: Asia Is The Heat Of The Moment

By David Gauvey Herbert

If you're interested in Asia, it's a good week. Chinese hackers are focus of a Brookings Institution panel discussion this afternoon, and the Center for Strategic and International Studies is talking U.S. policy in Southeast Asia on Tuesday.

Here are the events we know about so far:

Today

- The Brookings Institution hosts a discussion about the role of the Internet in U.S.-China relations. (2:30 p.m., The Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave. NW)

Tuesday

- Stanford professor Donald Emmerson discusses U.S. policy in Southeast Asia. (2 p.m., Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1800 K St. NW)
- The Brookings Institution hosts a discussion about the direction of Turkish domestic politics. (4 p.m., The Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave. NW)

Wednesday

- The New America Foundation hosts a discussion about Israel's religious right and how it impacts the peace process. (9 a.m., New America Foundation, 1899 L St. NW, Suite 400)
- The House Foreign Affairs Committee reflects on the nuclear security summit and looks ahead to the NPT Review Conference in May. (10 a.m., 2172 Rayburn)
- Jeffrey Feltman, former U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, appears before the House Foreign Affairs Committee to handicap the prospects of U.S. engagement with Syria. (1:30 p.m., 2172 Rayburn)

Thursday

- Deputy Secretary of State Jacob Lew and USAID Administrator Rajiv Shah address global food security before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. (10:30 a.m., 419 Dirksen)

Friday

- The Cato Institute hosts a discussion about immigration reform and whether American workers ought to have biometric national IDs. (Noon, B-340 Rayburn)
