16 political valentines to show your devotion to the one you love

Valentine's Day is right around the corner, and what better way to show your adoration for the liberty-loving, "House of Cards"-watching apple of your eye than with a political valentine?

In celebration of V-Day, a host of organizations on the right have put together batches of witty, adorable and politically charged valentines for supporters to send to their loved ones. This year, the Republican National Committee, the Cato Institute, The Heritage Foundation and the Jobs, Growth and Leadership Fund, Sen. Ted Cruz's (R-Texas) leadership PAC, took advantage of Democrats' gaffes, broken promises and Constitutional infringements to create their very own Valentine's Day cards.

And in honor of the release of Netflix's wildly popular "House of Cards," we've added some honoring politics' most ruthless couple, Frank and Claire Underwood.

So sharpen up those arrows, Cupids, and check out these 16 political valentines that are sure to warm your loved ones' hearts.
