Emergency at the border?

President Trump declared a national emergency at the southern border at the precise time in history when border crossings are the lowest in over 40 years.

Trump continued to claim that drugs pour over the border via illegal immigrants when his own government states that 90 percent of drugs come through legal ports of entry..

Trump continued to claim that illegal immigrants are responsible for "thousands of murders" and rampant crime when even the right-wing CATO Institute pointed out a Texas study showing crime among illegal immigrants is 46 percent lower than among native-born Americans.

When Trump declared, " I could do this over a longer period of time. I didn't need to do this," everyone with functioning brain waves laughed , lawyers about to bring suit rejoiced while the MAGA crowd failed to comprehend the utter stupidity of their white supreme leader.

When President Obama signed an executive order far less aggressive than the scam national emergency which violated congressional authority of the purse, Republicans screamed "tyranny" and Trump said "Well, he certainly did something that was unconstitutional — I think certainly he could be impeached and certainly they could shut down the government."

Trump was so alarmed by his fake emergency, he immediately flew off to spend his 169th day at a Trump-owned golf course.

Do you know who isn't playing golf? Robert Mueller.
