

Letter: Countries need to learn how to bribe the president

The libertarian-conservative CATO Institute, founded by the Charles Koch Foundation, informs us that citizens from the seven countries now on the travel ban list have killed no Americans. None. Zero

It also pointed out that terrorists from Saudi Arabia have killed 2,500-plus U.S. citizens, which is not one of those seven countries. So why is Saudi Arabia not included on the travel ban? The answer is simple and perfectly understandable: President Donald J. Trump has financial dealings with the Saudis, Pakistanis, etc.

Given this, I trust my following suggestion will seem clear-headed and logical. If a country wants to be removed from the travel ban listing, get involved with Trump Enterprises. Contact Donald Jr., Eric or Ivanka and suggest opening up your country to Trump Enterprises. Maybe a Trump Golf course in Mosul, Iraq. Or a line of Ivanka's shoes for women, recently discontinued at Nordstrom's, at shopping sites in Mogadishu, Somalia. Or Trump water and steaks from Hotel Trump in Aleppo, Syria. "Make America First" hats and flags made in Tehran, Iran. The possibilities are endless.

I offer this modest suggestion as a concerned and semi-enlightened citizen of this great nation.
