Trump's immigration ban protects his investments

Diane Hawthorne

February 26, 2017

Is it just coincidence that while Trump placed a travel ban on people from seven predominantly Muslim countries, countries where he has no business ties, he has excluded the five countries linked to his business empire?

He has huge license and development deals in the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, the same countries that produced the 9/11 terrorists who killed 3,000 people.

According to the libertarian Cato Institute, no one born in one of the banned countries executed a deadly attack on American soil between 1975 and 2015.

Trump has signed executive orders that benefit him and his billionaire cabinet, further increasing their enormous wealth. A couple of cases in point: executive orders lifting restrictions on financial institutions and lifting environmental regulations. What happened to “Make America Great Again?” Are we to go back to enormous banking fees, another mortgage crisis, polluted air, rivers and streams, another Flint, Michigan?

Over 300,000 people have signed petitions urging Trump to release his tax returns.

Kellyanne Conway says the American people don't care.

Really? Apparently, quite a few do. One wonders what Trump has to hide. Maybe he's not a billionaire, after all. But then, greed has a tendency to always rear its ugly head.
