

Indiana Named 4th Highest In Freedoms

August 16, 2016

The Cato Institute ranks Indiana Number Four in the nation in personal and economic freedoms.

The study considered taxation, the labor market, marriage, gun control and others.

The researchers say the Hoosier State could rise above the others by reducing debt and income taxes, allowing practice by independent nurse practitioners and opening up the laws governing alcohol to include happy hours, direct wine shipments and Sunday sales.
