In a viral social media post, a mother of three residing in Brooklyn, New York, boasts about how proud she is of living off the government teat, or as she so eloquently puts it, "raping the government." Cigarette in hand, she also taunts "the white man" and "b*" Americans "working 9 to 5."

Charming stuff.

"Got my own s*. Mother of three kids by myself — f it — and I don't pay taxes," says the woman in an Obamaphone-type post. "Lick my a."

"Welfare b* have more than you, b*! You workin' 9 to 5, b*! You still ain't got s*!" she continues, before bragging about having "Jordans on my feet all day, b*."

"I ain't working at no cash register, no fing Target, no fing sneaker store. You can kiss my a before I stoop that low," the woman continues, finding herself increasingly amusing.

As she brags about "raping the government," the single (crazy, right?) woman curses out the President of the United States, because why not.

"F Trump, f the government, I'm gonna rape this s* sittin' on my a*! I'm so gucci!" she says, clearly on a roll now. "The white man can kiss my ****!"

"Respect the fing game," she asserts. (Not a chance in hell.)

As widely known, NY, where the woman claims to reside, can be a haven for people looking to scam off the government. In fact, in 2015, the Cato Institute found that the NYS welfare system is more generous than that of Sweden or France.

"In New York, a mother with two children under the age of five who participates in six major welfare programs ... would receive a total benefits package with a value of more than $27,500 per year," reported The New York Post. "New York is much more generous than such well-known welfare states as France ($17,324), Germany ($23,257) and even Sweden ($22,111)."

In other words, the incentive for getting off government assistance is nowhere in sight, as this Brooklyn "welfare queen" makes painfully clear.
