

Friday July 13, 2012

Your vents, Friday, July 13

Page 2 of 2

- The health care law will not affect Obama's family at all. They will still get the best care when they need it. This will destroy the doctor and patient relationship. I wish the Supreme Court had struck it down.
- Who does Obama think he is to ask the American people for money? We don't have money anyway. He is like a television evangelist.
- I am so tired of seeing Obama's election advertisements on television. All he does is criticize Mitt Romney. He never says what his plan is. I will never vote for this man.
- I say bring back the death penalty. Why let a killer get away? What a waste of money. Just kill and get rid of them right away.
- The Cato Institute estimates that there will be $669 billion in new or increased taxes in the first 10 years of the Health Care Act.
- Those Democrats sure were upset about Trayvon Martin being killed but couldn't care less about border patrol agent Brian Terry being killed. Maybe if he were black, they would have cared.
- Can someone tell me why people who have nice convertibles go around with the top down and the windows closed? I've probably owned 50 cars and there is nothing as relaxing as going around with the top down and the windows open. You can always comb your hair.
- What I can't understand is people venting about the gas prices, but they need to vent about the cost of groceries. When gas goes up, so does the transportation cost of the goods. Another thing is that one cent off of the food tax doesn't help when they raise the price of groceries every week in the stores.