

December 30th, 2011, 3:40 pm # 1

ryanp Offline
Man On The Street Join Date: Aug 2011
Posts: 469

CATO institute on spending cut proposals: Paul 1st, Perry 2nd, Newt 3rd

Surprised to see Perry ranking fairly well with them. Keep in mind, these are just proposals, not ranking past history. And also these only take into positive consideration their specific proposals.

<http://dailycaller.com/2011/12/30/st...ht-on-details/>

They said Paul is unrivaled when it comes to listing specific spending cuts, Perry is good about which departments he wants to cut but doesn't mention how he will cut their statutory function, Newt has a lot of specifics but many are pro-spending.

Also surprisingly, Bachmann got the worst review and Romney pretty poor too.

Once again though these are just their proposals. Although Dems learned the hard way with Obama - get details.

Edit:

Oh, this quote has to go in here

Quote:

"He is the only candidate to put together an actual budget proposal," he said. "Paul's spending proposals would amount to the largest reduction in the size and scope of the federal government of any candidate."

Read more: <http://dailycaller.com/2011/12/30/st...#ixzz1i36FOYUs>

Last edited by ryanp; December 30th, 2011 at 3:54 pm.

Quote