

CATO: Johnson, “Most Interesting” of the Current POTUS Candidates

July 24th, 2012 · No Comments

In an article published yesterday by Gene Healy of the Cato Institute, Mr. Healy concludes:

Johnson . . . is certainly the most interesting candidate in the 2012 field — and that’s not an attempt to damn with faint praise. . . . I don’t know that “the world changes” if Johnson manages to claw his way into the debates. But the race would start to get interesting.

The article can be read in its entirety at:

<http://www.cato.org/publications/commentary/conversations-gov-gary>
Gene Healy is a vice president at the Cato Institute and the author of “The Cult of the Presidency: America’s Dangerous Devotion to Executive Power.”