

Republican Party ""wrong on war and economy"

Sunday, September 13

Rep Thaddeus McCotter, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee, in an interview with National Reviews Peter Robinson, said "war, prosperity, you had two major issues the Republican party was wrong on." It was in context of the GOP losing in 2012 and the parties future. Although he might certainly explain it away as being not what he intended to say, I took it as a moment of honesty. Wrong as in the publics opinion, or wrong as in Republican party should have not went to war in Iraq and never supported the bailouts, I don't know. Gary Johnson has made his view known on the war and the economy, I know what most of the country thinks about those issues. Leaders of the GOP need to admit this and shy away from defending the war and their support of the bailout. The people are willing to forgive and move forward with a real agenda of less government in all areas, domestic and foreign.

Understanding the Issues is Key

Saturday, September 12

The Cato Institute-Individual Liberty, Free Markets and Peace, (every single issue facing America can be solved if we follow those three principles) was founded in 1977 by Edward H. Crane. It is a non-profit public policy research foundation out of Washington D.C. They hold regular briefings on Capital Hill, plus policy and book forums. The video and audio recordings are available for download on their site Cato.org/podcasts. Last night I listened to A Harsh Climate for Trade: How Climate Change Proposals Threaten Global Commerce, the night before Understanding Health Care Co-ops. I am anxiously waiting for the upcoming Should the United States Withdraw from Afghanistan?

A wide range of topics are there for you to be educated on. If you are an inspired liberty minded individual who yearns for knowledge and wants to understand the issues facing America, from the perspective of Individual Liberty, Free Markets and Peace, Cato.org is the first place to go. The site is full of policy studies, publications, books, blogs, newsletters, enough raw knowledge for a life time. The policy scholars, fellows and speakers of the Institute are some of the best informed, well spoken Americans one can find. Like everybody and everything nowadays, they are also active in the major social networks.

Cato might be well known by the liberty crowd of yesterday, who have been fighting for limited government before I was born. But with the last presidential election and the events of the last decade, plus the new power of the internet, there are thousands of young men and women who might need an introduction to Cato. Leading them to established entities who have vehicles in place to fight for what they believe in should be more of a focus.
