

Legal Theory Blog

"All the theory that fits."

MAY 09, 2012

Shapiro on Partisanship in Judicial Nominations

Ilya Shapiro (Cato Institute) has posted Big Government Causes Partisanship in Judicial Nominations (Georgetown Journal of Law & Public Policy, Vol. 10, 2012) on SSRN. Here is the abstract:

This Article is an edited transcript of a presentation I gave at the annual Georgetown Journal of Law & Public Policy symposium on "Hyper-Partisanship and the Law" on March 20, 2012. I argue that nothing is wrong with the judicial nomination/confirmation process per se, but that its politicization is a function of the growth of the federal government beyond its constitutional parameters.

Posted by Lawrence Solum on May 09, 2012 at 08:54 AM | Permalink