Center for Freedom & Prosperity Leads Our Battles

Bob Bauman (November 9, 2010)

The Center for Freedom and Prosperity and its CF&P Foundation have been, and continue to be, some of the most effective and successful pro-freedom research groups in America.

In recent years it has been an honor for the Sovereign Society to join with the CF&P in several causes in defense of economic liberty and in opposition to high taxes and big government power grabs.

One of the main objectives of the CFP has been educating American politicians and the public about the true nature of pending economic and other major policy decisions.

Mitchell vs. the White House

In a new CF&P mini-documentary released this week, our friend and associate, Dan Mitchell of the Cato Institute, provides a point-by-point rebuttal of a recent White House pro-tax increase propaganda video.

The full White House production, narrated by Council of Economic Advisers Chairman Austan Goolsbee, is actually presented in the CF&P video, debate style, allowing viewers to get both sides of the argument.

In the CF&P video, entitled "Debunking White House Pro-Tax Increase Propaganda," Dan explains that the Obama's administration's analysis is based on the odd notion, easily disproven, that the U.S. economy is a fixed pie. He shows that changes in tax rates have a significant impact on taxpayer behavior, refuting another key premise of Goolsbee's video.

It's Ours, Not Theirs

The most fundamental flaw of the White House's video, however, is the philosophically corrupt assumption that government has the first claim on money earned by the American people.

Goolsbee actually claims at one point that it would be a mistake for the government to "give" money to selected taxpayers.
