P.J. O'ROURKE ON THE TEA PARTY MOVEMENT'S FOREIGN POLICY: "There is no Tea Party foreign policy as far as I can tell." But then, as he correctly notes, it's a movement, not a party. Plus this:

If the Tea Party movement, so-called, achieves "small, effective government with low taxes and free enterprise," America will be a much richer nation. A much richer nation will have a much more powerful foreign policy, whether it means to or wants to or not.

Indeed.
