Overlawyered

Chronicling the high cost of our legal system

Forcing non-members to pay for unions' political advocacy

by WALTER OLSON on SEPTEMBER 23, 2011

Early next year the Supreme Court will hear Knox v. SEIU Local 1000, an important case about union power and individual conscience. The Cato Institute has joined several other organizations in filing an amicus brief (PDF), as my colleague Ilya Shapiro explains here.

Related posts

- September 3 roundup (o)
- Podcast interview: Cato's Ilya Shapiro (o)
- Panel: "Union influence on public policy" (1)
- Mark your calendar: Cato Constitution Day Sept. 15 (0)
- March 3 roundup (1)

Tagged as: Cato Institute, labor unions, Supreme Court