

Wednesday Media Alert

Posted on March 27, 2012 by Steven Hayward

So here's a heads-up for Power Line readers: tomorrow (Wednesday), I'll be guest-hosting Bill Bennett's "Morning in America" radio show again from 6 – 9 am eastern time. You can listen online quite conveniently at www.billbennett.com if the show is not carried by a local station in your area. I've got my guests already lined up: we'll be conversing with Dan Mitchell of the Cato Institute about the Ryan budget plan and other fiscal issues; Robert Bryce of the Manhattan Institute, who is one of my favorite energy analysts, and Ramesh Ponnuru of National Review, about the state of play in the Obamacare case at the Supreme Court after two days. Plus taking calls as always, so I hope some of you will call in. I'll also be running a contest that will give away free signed copies of my *Politically Incorrect Guide to the Presidents* to callers who get the right answer to presidential trivia questions.

After the show, I'll be hopping a plane out to the left coast, where I'm having a secret Power Line editorial board meeting with John, though I guess it's not a secret any more if I just mentioned it here. If the weather cooperates (rain is in the forecast right now), we might do a quick video podcast for Thursday.