On March 23, the Cato Institute will host two panel discussions analyzing the Affordable Care Act and the possible implications of the Court's rulings. The first panel will be moderated by Ilya Shapiro of the Cato Institute and will include Michael Cannon of the Cato Institute, Randy Barnett of Georgetown University Law Center, and Elizabeth Wydra of the Constitutional Accountability Center. The second panel will be moderated by Roger Pilon of the Cato Institute and will include Jagadeesh Gokhale of the Cato Institute, Timothy Sandefur of Pacific Legal Foundation and Simon Lazarus of the National Senior Citizens Law Center. More information is available at Cato's website.
