Cato Constitution Day Events, Sept 17:

The Cato Institute always puts on an interesting program for Constitution Day, which is every September 17: You can see the schedule for this year's events here. There's lots of interesting stuff, although the only Conspirator who is speaking this year is me. You can watch last year's event online here.

A somewhat enigmatic observation. :)

It seems strange that the linked United States Constitution Day website uses a Cocos Island domain name. I suppose we should thank this Australian territory (pop. 600, primarily Muslim) for its contributions to American patriotism.

POST COMMENT

If you have a comment about spelling, typos, or format errors, please e-mail the poster directly rather than posting a comment.

Comment Policy: We reserve the right to edit or delete comments, and in extreme cases to ban commenters, at our discretion. Comments must be relevant and civil (and, especially, free of name-calling). We think of comment threads like dinner parties at our homes. If you make the party unpleasant for us or for others, we'd rather you went elsewhere. We're happy to see a wide range of viewpoints, but we want all of them to be expressed as politely as possible.

We realize that such a comment policy can never be evenly enforced, because we can't possibly monitor every comment equally well. Hundreds of comments are posted every day here, and we don't read them all. Those we read, we read with different degrees of attention, and in different moods. We try to be fair, but we make no promises.

And remember, it's a big Internet. If you think we were mistaken in removing your post (or, in extreme cases, in removing you) -- or if you prefer a more free-for-all approach -- there are surely plenty of ways you can still get your views out.
