

The Corner

ABOUT | ARCHIVE | E-MAIL | LOG IN TO COMMENT

The Big Distractions

By Jonah Goldberg

Posted on August 11, 2010 8:58 AM

I'm with Michael Tanner today. I might argue this or that differently, but at the end of the day, running against Obama, the Democrats, and Big Government is more than enough going into November. In 2006, all the Democrats did was run against Bush. That's it. And it was more than enough. The GOP has much more substance to run on already. It does not need to antagonize swing voters or hand Democrats issues that make it easier for them to demonize and distract Republicans. Fighting Obamacare, the stimulus, joblessness, soaring deficits and debt, and the arrogance of Democratic rule should be enough for the next few months.

PERMALINK