

Another Fatal Flaw of Obamacare

- Mon, June 18, 2012
- Cato Institute
- Dateline: Washington, D.C.

The President's health care law does not, as it turns out, empower the IRS to punish employers for failing to provide workers with government-approved health insurance when the state in question has refused to create its own state-based health insurance exchange. The IRS, however, is moving ahead without Congressional authorization. Jonathan Adler, a professor of law at Case Western Reserve University, offers his thoughts. Video produced by Caleb O. Brown and Austin Bragg.