

The 23 New Taxes Floated By The Obama Administration

Lawrence Delevingne | Jan. 25, 2010, 9:03 AM | 59,714 | 19

Tags: Economy, Features, Politics, Taxes, Budget

America is deep in debt. Like $12.3 trillion deep.

For the first time, it's becoming a hot political issue, and just this weekend Obama announced plans to convene a task force for the purpose of beating the debt.

So does that mean less spending?

Ha! No.

It means more taxes.

Cato Institute's executive vice president David Boaz recently put together a helpful list of revenue raising ideas publicly floated by President Obama and his aides and allies.

See 23 new taxes the administration is considering >

What's This?

See Also:

SHOCKER: We Do Not Completely Hate Obama's New Bank Tax Plan

Mauldin: The 2011 Tax Hikes Will Kill The Economy

Now See The Real State Of Collapsing State Tax Revenues

Lawrence Delevingne is a writer at The Business Insider.
Contact:
e-mail: ldlevingne@businessinsider.com
Subscribe to his twitter feed

Recent Posts
After All This Time, \$3 Bill...
The Guy Who Crashed Amaranth...
STRATFOR'S TOP PREDICTIONS F...

Featured Comments