Obama Health Care Speech Live Blogs

by Doug Mataconis @ 5:51 pm on September 9, 2009.

I won't be able to watch President Obama's speech tonight due to previous commitments, but you can catch several live blogs of the speech that are sure to be entertaining.

The health care policy team at Cato Institute will be live-blogging the speech as well, starting at 8pm.

Jason Pye and a few of my co-bloggers at United Liberty will be doing a live blog that starts at 7:45pm.

Andrew Sullivan will be doing one as well.

But, for sheer entertainment value, there's really one one place to go:

But of course I'll liveblog the President's Big Address tonight. Look for the link here and at Pajamas Media at around 7:45PM Eastern/4:45PM Pacific.

The first martini goes in the shaker around 45 minutes before the show starts, refilled as often as necessary

That's right, it's another Stephen Green drunkblogging, apparently the sixth one since Obama was sworn in. Frankly, given that pace and the number of debates we had during the 2008 Election, I'm wondering if Steve's liver isn't going to be filing assault charges soon.
