

The misery index, Albania better than its neighbors

Feb. 3, 2015

According to a recent report published regarding the "misery index", Albania has a better standard than its neighbors. The list of 108 countries, states that the data for this analysis were obtained from the World Bank, and the grading was based on the results of the past year.

Cato Institute says that Albania has marked some progress. According to the Institute, our country has better living standards than neighboring countries like Serbia, Greece or Macedonia, and Kosovo is not included in the list in question.

The five most miserable places in the world at the end of 2014 are Venezuela, Argentina, Syria, Ukraine and Iran, while the five less miserable are Brunei, Switzerland, China, Taiwan and Japan. The US is ranked 95.
