

MONDAY, AUG 30, 2010 18:31 ET

Monday link dump: The sandwich party patriots

Anti-tax violence erupts in DC, Barbara Bush's photoshoot, and the Cato Institute's financial "regulation" plans.

BY ALEX PAREENE

- › David Addington is now comfortably resting at the Heritage Foundation, instead of in jail. Make no mistake, he'll be back as soon as the next Republican takes the White House.
- › Glenn Beck's rally featured anti-tax sandwich violence.
- › "Man Already Knows Everything He Needs To Know About Muslims"
- › Former first daughter Barbara Bush was actually in a Terry Richardson photoshoot. Which is kind of insane. I mean, it is kind of not at all surprising, too, I guess, because this is 2010 America.
- › And what happens when you walk around the Glenn Beck rally dressed as a hungry, pregnant demon? Well, people get mad and yell at you, yes, but also a surprising number of people give you sandwiches!
- › Conor Friedesdorf just wants to drink beer in public and set off fireworks. Finally, a conservatism I can get behind!
- › Examining 15 years of financial deregulation policy from the Cato Institute.
- › The Republicans on the Deficit commission are more conservative than the Democrats are liberal.
- › How will having three women justices change the Supreme Court?

Copyright ©2010 Salon Media Group, Inc. Reproduction of material from any Salon pages without written permission is strictly prohibited.

SALON® is registered in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office as a trademark of Salon Media Group Inc.

Associated Press articles: Copyright ©2010 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.