

November 25, 2009

TV news celebrities to headline Partnership dinner

From Register staff and news services

Paul Begala, a political analyst and commentator on CNN, and Tucker Carlson, a contributor to Fox News, will be the featured speakers at the Greater Des Moines Partnership's annual dinner Jan. 21, providing "A View from the Left and Right," the group said Tuesday.

The business group says Begala, a Democrat strategist, and Carlson, a Cato Institute senior fellow, will provide a "lively and provocative preview of the 2010 political climate."

The annual dinner will be held at Hy-Vee Hall, 730 Third St. The event costs $125 to $150 per person and $1,250 to $1,500 per table. For reservations, call (515) 286-4948.

The event also will mark the shift of the group's board leadership from Steve Lacy of Meredith Corp. to Doug Reichardt of Holmes Murphy & Associates.
