

Gene Healy

[\[Print\]](#) [\[Email\]](#)

Share

Gene Healy: Was it a 'church picnic' or a freedom rally?

By: Gene Healy
Examiner Columnist
August 30, 2010

In the run-up to Glenn Beck's religious-themed rally at the Lincoln Memorial Saturday, Rep. John Fleming, R.-La., issued a stark warning about the voters' choice in November. Either we "remain a Christian nation," he told a GOP women's group last week, or it's "down the socialist road" to "a godless society."

Standing by was Fleming's fellow Louisiana Republican, Sen. David Vitter, the most famous "john" in 2007's "D.C. Madam" scandal. Awkward.

The GOP has lately drawn energy from the Tea Party movement, which sprung up in 2009 to protest overweening government. That's where the TP'ers kept the focus early on, sensibly calling a truce on "culture war" issues.

Unfortunately, judging by the rise of "Christian nation" rhetoric among Tea Party figures, that's starting to change.

In April, Sarah Palin told the evangelical group "Women of Joy": "Lest anyone try to convince you that God should be separated from the state, our founding fathers, they were believers."

They were -- but so what? Those believers deliberately crafted "A Godless Constitution." In their 1996 book by that name, scholars Isaac Kramnick and R. Laurence Moore chronicle our proud heritage of secular government, in which, as Madison put it in his "Memorial and Remonstrance," religious beliefs are "not the object of civil government, nor under its jurisdiction."

The Constitution's early critics complained "that it was indifferent to Christianity." The Rev. Timothy Dwight, president of Yale, thought we were losing the War of 1812 because we had "offended Providence," having "formed our Constitution without any acknowledgment of God."

Indeed, Kramnick and Moore write, the Framers enshrined "the Lockean liberal ideal" in the nation's fundamental law, creating "a demystified state, stripped of all religious ambitions."

Today, some Americans apparently fret about whether President Obama is "really" a Christian. Well, he sure sounds like one, as when he complained last summer about "folks who are frankly bearing false witness" about his health care bill, or when, on the campaign trail, he told one church gathering that, with the right leadership, "we can create a Kingdom right here on Earth."

Whatever happened to that "demystified state"?

I headed to the Beck rally Saturday, seeking fodder for a "What I Saw at the Revolution" column. But what I saw wasn't all that revolutionary.

Amid the usual Gadsden ("Don't Tread on Me") banners were a few "Christian flags" -- white, with a red cross in a blue canton. Mostly gone were the spunky anti-government signs that dominated earlier rallies (organizers had discouraged them). Overall, it was largely as Beck had promised: 8/28 had "nothing to do with politics" and "everything to do with God."

The God Preacher Beck described from the Lincoln Memorial steps wasn't a vengeful Old Testament deity enraged by ruling-class corruption, but a benign, grandfatherly one who just wants America to be all it can be.

Some reporters likened 8/28 to a "religious revival," but it wasn't nearly that fervid and exciting. For once, the New York Times's description rang true: It "had the feeling of a large church picnic."

I confess I liked the Tea Partiers better when they were a little angrier -- and when they stuck to the point.

America is a "Christian Nation" only in a trivial sense: that most of us, now and at the founding, are Christians.

And that's neither here nor there. "Creeping secularism" and insensitively situated mosques aren't what plagues us -- it's a deluge of red ink falling on the just and the unjust alike.

Renewed faith may save your soul, but it won't save us from our looming fiscal apocalypse. For that, we need energized citizens who keep their eye on the ball.

Examiner Columnist Gene Healy is a vice president at the Cato Institute and the author of "The Cult of the Presidency."

More from Gene Healy

- Was it a 'church picnic' or a freedom rally?
- Can Obama order executions of citizens abroad?
- 'Mosque' debate is a red herring
- Real 'hope and change' in the United Kingdom
- Has Congress become useless?

Topics

Gene Healy

Now that the CBO is saying it, is it still 'barely true?'

So, the stimulus did cost more than the Iraq War. So says the Congressional Budget Office. When our own Mark Tapscott posted that information, it was grudgingly acknowledged by...

—David Freddoso

Cost: Obamacare has killed the Dems, but they're in denial

Jay Cost, over at RealClearPolitics: It would be difficult for any strong partisan to admit that such an accomplishment [as Obamacare] was so deeply unpopular. Yet the...

—David Freddoso

The party of the rich

Democrats and the media still brand Republicans as the party of the rich, and Republicans seem to believe it's true. It's not. Today, we get the latest little data...

—Timothy P. Carney

AP poll indicates passionate voters tilting GOP

In an off-year election, voter turnout is typically lower than in non-presidential years. That's why voter "intensity" is an important predictor of how each...

—Matthew Sheffield

More Beltway Confidential posts...

To view this site, you need to have Flash Player 8.0 or later installed. Click here to get the latest Flash player.

MOST POPULAR STORIES

Malicious Muni free rider thwarted by police

SFO security cameras help catch purse thief

Cops: Eight story plunge was attempted murder-suicide

Four arrested in Bayview officer-involved shooting

Sewage spill nearly 10 times bigger than initial estimates

Car-free Market meets expectations

Snake that escaped from Atlanta zoo found dead

BART delayed out of Lake Merritt Station due to smoke

Doc offers tips to keep your back straight

Borders prepares to turn page on South Beach

WeeklyStandard.com

Recent Posts

- Crist Won't Do 'Meet the Press' With Rubio and Meek
- What Palin Did Friday Night
- The Daily Grind
- The ACLU Sues to Prohibit "Targeted Kill
- Ter

Turn your blog into a customized app ✕

Make a custom blog app you can share with others!

widgetbox

Get Widget

.submission { display: none; } .submission { display: none; }

Reader Comments

All comments on this page are subject to our Terms of Use and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Examiner or its staff. Comment box is limited to 200 words. Comments that advocate violence, racism, or libel as well as comments written in ALL CAPS are not permitted.

blog comments powered by Disqus

RSS | Twitter | Facebook | Mobile | Contact Us | Rack Locations | Advertise | Terms of Use | Privacy Policy

Find this article at:

http://www.sfexaminer.com/opinion/columns/Gene\_Healy/Was-it-a\_church-picnic\_-or-a-freedom-rally\_-654707-101825638.html

Check the box to include the list of links referenced in the article.