How Much Will Government Health Care Cost? Meet Dr. Government

By U.S. Senator Jon Kyl

and are likely to do so by delaying and denying care. The chairman's proposal already includes provisions that cut Medicare benefits.

Eventually, when health-care spending threatens to take over the federal budget, Congress will likely impose new restrictions on other patients, as well. No longer would families and doctors have the final say. It's hard to believe this could happen in America.

Republicans believe we don't need to destroy what works for most Americans to achieve health-care reform. And we believe we must protect seniors' Medicare Advantage program that would see a $120-billion, 10-year cut under this proposal.

We believe in patient-oriented reforms that would lower costs and improve access. Our proposals include passing comprehensive medical malpractice reform, allowing small businesses to band together to buy insurance at discounted rates just as large companies do, and allowing all Americans to buy lower-cost insurance policies from any state.

We want to empower patients, families, and doctors, not federal bureaucrats.
