Walter Olson, long time tort “reformer” and my occasional sparring partner, has moved from the Manhattan Institute \(and his home base at Point of Law\) to the Cato Institute. He will continue on with Overlawyered, where he continues to provide fodder for legal commentary, while Ted Frank (both my sparring partner and my lawyer) tries to fill his shoes at MI;

This is Scott Greenfield's policy on putting links in comments. I follow much of the same here;

Snoopy tried to break in to a prison. He got caught, which means, I suppose, that he succeeded? He'll probably have to surrender the costume;

How much should it cost to prepare a record and transcript from court? How about \$10 per page?

Are you storing your law firm data in a cloud? And is the cloud safe?

Using an iPad at trial;

60 bits of wisdom from Brian Tannebaum, including this nugget: “If you have a bad feeling about taking a case, don't.”

Both Roy Mura and I were quoted in an column in the New York Law Journal on proposed changes to our No-Fault law;

We apparently have the lowest taxes since 1950. Should someone tell the Tea Party?

A look at malpractice systems in other countries. It might be important to note, of course, that those other countries have significantly different social safety nets, for which the people are taxed;

Facebook users continue to lose more and more control over privacy settings. How many will quit?

TortsProf with the Personal Injury Law Round-Up;

Blawg Review #263 celebrates Mother's Day with an epic compilation (though I try to celebrate it with Mrs. NYPILB on the two days she did the hard work); and

Blawg Review #264 commemorates the Irish Famine

The New York Personal Injury Law Blog is sponsored by its creator, Eric Turkewitz of The Turkewitz Law Firm. The blog might be considered a form of attorney advertising in accordance with New York rules going into effect February 1, 2007 (22 NYCRR 1200.1, et. seq.) As of July 14, 2008, Law.com became an advertiser, as you can see in the sidebar. Law.com does not control the editorial content of the blog in any way.

Throughout the blog as it develops, you may see examples of cases we have handled, or cases from others, that are used for illustrative purposes. Since all cases are different, and legal authority may change from year to year, it is important to remember that prior results in any particular case do not guarantee or predict similar outcomes with respect to any future matter, including yours, in which any lawyer or law firm may be retained.

Some of the commentary may be become outdated. Some might be a minority opinion, or simply wrong. No reader should consider this site (or any other) to be authoritative, and if a legal issue is presented, the reader should contact an attorney of his or her own choosing for advice.

Finally, we are not responsible for the comments of others that may be added to this site.
