Giving Readers What They Don't Want
Andrew Ferguson, Commentary

In early May, on the evening of the day his magazine got shot out from under him, the editor of Newsweek, Jon Meacham, appeared on the Daily Show with Jon Stewart, seeking fellowship, commiseration, and a platform from which he... more >>

Campaign Attack Ads: As Old As the Edsel
Walter Shapiro, Politics Daily

It has been lost in the mists of political history, but a 10-second clip from the 1956 presidential campaign is America's forgotten film classic, the primitive black-and-white precursor of the modern TV attack ad. Cynically... more >>

On the Separation of Press and State
Roger Pilon, Cato Institute

As it often does, The Wall Street Journal this morning offers us an op-ed with which it surely must disagree, entitled "Journalism Needs Government Help" – bringing to mind the fabled knock on the door:... more >>
