Cato's Ilya Shapiro Accepts Debate on Constitutionality of Obamacare

There was some chatter on the blogosphere that people opposing the health care bill in the U.S. couldn't find anyone to debate against its constitutionality. According to these people constitutional objection to the health care bill was purely political, although even in the context of modern Supreme Court made constitutional law one can find no precedent of Congress' authority to force every single American to purchase a product from a private company. Anyway, CATO's senior fellow in constitutional studies, Ilya Shapiro, set out to prove these bloggers wrong by accepting debate anytime, anyplace, and anywhere, on the constitutionality of Obamacare:
