~ The view from The Cato Institute. Plus: "A great moment for freedom of speech," says
the International Free Press Society.
Alternatively: "a war for Canada" or "[the right
to ridicule](#)"

~ Even the lefties over at The Rabble don't want Commissar Lynch in their lives:

Notwithstanding the slimy and repulsive ideologies of Steyn and Levant - who would gladly see not just Section 13, but real human rights legislation revoked - Section 13 must be repealed. It is bizarre, unnecessary, and offensive to freedom.

The last part is absolutely correct (and, in a bipartisan spirit, even the bit about Steyn's slimy repulsiveness is not without merit).

~ On the air: Mark's post-game interview
with Rob Breakenridge - and high viewership

Politics & warPINING FOR CIVIL DISCOURSE

Re ChiCom cheerleader Thomas Friedman's embarrassing column, I wrote about this phenomenon back when it started during the election campaign. The left spent much of the 43rd presidency fantasizing about the assassination of Bush. They seem determined to spend the 44th fantasizing about the assassination of Obama. Neither manifestation of this...

HAPPY WARRIOR from National Review I was overseas when Senator Edward Kennedy died, and a European reporter asked me what my "most vivid memory" of the great man. I didn't like to say, because it didn't seem quite the appropriate occasion. But my only close encounter with the Lion of the...

Greatest hitsPOINT OF NO RETURN

Twelve months ago, the advance of Senator Obama to President Obama was starting to look inevitable, thanks in part to some characteristically Beltwaycentric bungling from John McCain, for whom the economic crisis of mid-September provided the perfect opportunity for the peculiar combination of narcissism and self-destruction he appears to favor....
