

Surprisingly Free

Surprisingly Free

- Home
- About
- News
- Archives
- Podcast
- Research Papers
- Subscribe

Tim Lee on bottom-up processes, innovation, and the future of news

by Jerry Brito on September 26, 2009 · Comments

Episode 1: Play in Popup | Download

Tim Lee, a graduate student in computer science at Princeton and adjunct scholar at the Cato Institute, discusses bottom-up processes, the theme of his new blog. The discussion also turns to the innovators dilemma, the link economy, and the future of newspapers.

Related Readings

- Bottom-Up, a blog by Tim Lee
- Evolutionary Psychology at Wikipedia
- Free! Why \$0.00 Is the Future of Business by Chris Anderson (discussing Carver Mead's insight to "waste transistors")
- Gin, Television, and Social Surplus by Clay Shirky
- The Good Enough Revolution by Robert Capps
- On the Link Economy by Jeff Jarvis
- Post-Medium Publishing by Paul Graham

Remember to subscribe to the podcast using RSS or iTunes.

 Comments  Share  Print  Email This Post

About Jerry Brito