

Arizona Hispanic Republicans

Posts Tagged 'CATO Institute'

Latinos won't vote GOP in 2012 until legal immigration reform

Wednesday, August 24th, 2011

Tequila Party Movement — DeeDee Garcia Blase

From the Huffington Post — Latino Voices.

Much commotion has been made concerning a recent Republican effort to win over Latino voting support. While it might be admirable for the GOP to make an attempt to reach out to Latinos during a Presidential election year, I am afraid that their efforts will be fruitless until they reverse the actions of their dismal record regarding last December's 2010

Find the right fit at home
Discreet protection delivered to your door

Depend

Try the free sample ▶

The Republican Party can no longer claim to be pro-family, when over one million families have been forced apart or detained through their “attrition through enforcement” policies. It can no longer pride itself on pro-life views, since they attacked American-born baby rights via the 14th Amendment. It can no longer pride itself on jobs and the economy, because they are hurting the economy through their protectionism. Daniel Griswold from the CATO Institute told me that one low-skilled undocumented farm worker produces 3.1 middle income jobs to native born Americans via packaging, transportation and marketing. Since the passage of Georgia's harsh anti-immigrant law, Georgia farmers have become desperate in their need to replace 11,000 farm workers who fled in mass exodus.

Read the rest here.

Tags: 2012 Hispanic vote, Brian Sandoval, CATO Institute, DeeDee Garcia Blase, Hispanic Leadership Network, National Tequila Party Movement, Norm Coleman, Susana Martinez, Tequila Party
Posted in Secure Borders and Reasonable Immigration Solution, Tequila Party Movement, The Nativist Anti-immigrant Movement | 4 Comments »

