WEAL Bogat
NRC Neil Boortz's Fair Tax book is the best approach I've seen to addressing inequities in the antiquated US income tax system. The current system punishes productivity and rewards languor. It also punishes Main Street in a manner far differently than politicos like Rep. Charles Rangel (D-N.Y.) who has never apologized to the American people for his tax lapses even though he heads the committee that writes our regulations. Sometimes you hear the Libertarian party mentioned in a negative rendering, such as when 9/11 truthers are mentioned, though technically that movement is not part of the party's official platform. I've heard a number of celebs declare their politics lean towards Libertarianism—Judge Andrew Napolitano, for instance. Judge Napolitano is the youngest life-tenured Superior Court judge in the history of the State of New Jersey. Another high profile voice is that of Neil Boortz, whose book on the Fair Tax is the most logical approach to solving the taxation crisis in America l've seen. According to the website The Advocates, entertainer Clint Eastwood is also associated with Libertarian beliefs. I've heard Glenn Beck declare an affinity for Libertarian principles.

Most of us associate Dr. Ron Paul's politics with the Libertarian Party although he is technically a Republican.

Traditionally Libertarians are associated with Republicans in the populist psyche, and there are platform elements in common. But Libertarians have a distinct platform that makes them unique-a purist adherence to the U.S. Constitution, solid protection of individual rights and small government. The Party has been equally critical of Democrats and Republicans. And though a facet of the GOP enjoys Libertarian support for individual candidates, the GOP grassroots tends to be as disgusted with Libertarians in the same manner they view Democrats. That's to be expected, of course. A third party, if it is legitimate, must have a unique platform of its own and stands in direct competition to the two parties that dominate American list?

The Examiner media brand

As traditional media gave a nod to the tea parties September 12, Fox News was alone in airing continuing coverage.

No one mentioned the Libertarians. Why do branded media exclude this party?
